IN THE POLICE COURT

TWENTY-THREE OFFENDERS IN THE DOCK.

Most of Them Were Sentenced, Though Some of Them Got Off With Personal Bonds.

Judge Scott was in his place promptly at 9:30 o'clock this morning in the District branch of the Police Court ready to dispense justice to the twenty-three unfortunates who were in the toils on charges of a petty character. Court, however, did not start until fifteen minutes behind the scheduled time, the delay being occasioned by the non-arrival of Prosecuting Attorney Pugh, who was detained in his office preparing the papers against those in the dock. In the meantime a number of policemen, who had been on duty all night, were kept from their sleep. "John Ryan," called Clerk Harper, when the wheels of justice began to revolve. "Here," was the reply from a man about thirty-two years of age, who was arraigned on a charge of vagrancy.

"Ryan was drunk and begging for some-thing to eat in Southeast Washington last night," a policeman reported to the court What have you got to say?" Bailiff Hughes asked the man behind the bars.
"Not a thing," was the quick response.

"Twenty dollars or sixty days. Alexander B. Rowe, a barber, the next in vagrancy. "What has Alex. been doing?" Prosecut ing Attorney Pugh asked Policeman Mc-

"I've seen him drunk every other night for the last six weeks," the officer an-"Your honer I have been having chills and they took all my strength from me and I can hardly walk." was the statement Rowe made to Judge Scott.

"Fersonal bonds.

A Sad Case.

A sad case was called to the attention of the court when Peter Fleming, a man about sixty years of age, was arraigned on a charge of vagrancy. Both of Fleming's legs are removed just above the knees and he has no fingers on either of his hands.
"What has this unfortunate man been doing this time?" Mr. Pugh asked Bicycle Williams, after recognizing Policeman Fleming as having been in court before.
"He's been laying around in South Washington for several days drunk most of the nquired. Because I was a fool." Well, be a man and go back."

"Will you give me a pass?" the cripple wanted to know. "I'm not a silver mine and neither am I railroad company," the court told him.
"I could get back home easy if I had a railroad pass," the man continued.
"And the only passes that I can give are to the fail and workhouse," Judge Scott informed him.

At the suggestion of Mr. Pugh, the court sent for Dr. Wilson of the board of charities to have him make some arrangement to assist Fleming in returning to his far distant home. Dr. Wilson sent word that it would be necessary to investigate the man's story, and the court held him for

Denial of No Avail. "I'm not that," said Michael O'Day, a man about forty years of age, when he was arraigned on a charge of vagrancy. "He spends most of his time under the influence of liquor in South Washington," was the statement a policeman made. "I hardly ever miss a day from my work," O'Day declared. "You are not charged with working." the court told the man, "but with getting "But I can't work and get drunk, too,"

O'Day explained.
"That's easy," his honor said. "You work during the daytime and get drunk at night. "But I don't get drunk."

The court, however, thought that he did, and taxed him $30, naming imprisonment in jail for three months as the equivalent. The next in line, Joe Shorter, a very tall colored man, was charged with misbehavfor in front of the post office yesterday aft-"He was drunk and trying to raise a dis-rbance," Policeman Boyce recited.

"What do you want to say?" Shorter was "Nothing.

"Ten dollars or thirty days." A Traveling Minister.

Robert J. F. Brann, a traveling minister, who said that he left California several years ago to spread the gospel broadcast, denied that he was a vagrant.

Edward F. Guy, the chief witness against Brann, said that the latter was holding a religious meeting near the fountain at the corner of 7th street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest last night, and that he saw several persons give him money.
"What was he preaching about?" his honor wanted to know.

"That Christians should not marry or work. "We are pretty well supplied with ministers here in this city, and I think it would be cell for you to go to the Philip-pines or some other place where the supply is not quite so large," Judge Scott sug-"I'm ready to leave if you let me," the preacher replied. Take his personal bonds with that understanding," the court instructed Clerk

Joseph Haverly, about twenty-two years of age, pleaded guilty to a charge of car-rying a loaded revolver. He said that he was on his way to Philadelphia, but he will spend the next six months here unless he pays a fine of $50 which the court imposed on him. Owen Donnelly, John Curley and Charles Moberly were in the tolls on a joint charge of vagrancy.

"Holding up pedestrians in Georgetown last night." Policeman Peterson told his honor.
"Holding them up for what?" the court inquired.

"For money to buy beer." Each of the men declared that the offi-cer was mistaken, but the court thought not, and levied an assessment of $40 on each, giving them the privilege of spending the next six months in jail in lieu of pay-"They arrived at Benning yesterday on a "side-door Pullman," Mounted Policeman Riley said after Oscar Johnson and Francis James were arraigned on a joint charge of vagrancy. We want to go to Baltimore," the men said in chorus.

"Personal bonds, with the understanding that they leave the District," his honor

ASKED TO CONSTRUE WILL Executors of Estate of Mrs. J. M. D.

Lander Appeal to Court. Proceedings in equity, the court being asked to construe the will of the late Mrs. Jean Margaret D. Lander, were instituted late yesterday by Charles J. Bell and James R. Garfield, in their capacity as executors and testamentary trustees, those named as defendants being Frederick Charles Lander, Baring Bros. & Co., Frederick Lander Young, Charles Lander Young, Margaret Donald Ewing Mackay, Sarah R. Hartley, Mary McMacken, Actors' Fund of America, Garfield Memorial Hospital, Newsboys and Children's Aid Society, Colored Orphans' Home, Bell Home for Children, Henry K. Willard and James Schouler. Mrs. Lander was the widow of General Lander and many years ago, as Jean Dav-enport, was prominent as an actress. She died August 2, 1903, leaving a personal estate of the appraised value of $99,366.20, of which $46,951 was in stocks and $52,415.20 in bonds and notes.

The executors point out that after the satisfaction of the specific bequests embraced in the will of Mrs. Lander, the payment of the debts due from the estate, expenses of administration, cost of the monu-ment to mark the grave of the decedent, as specified in her will, and the payment of legacies to Frederick Lander Young, Charles Lander Young, Anna Flawn and Margaret Donald Ewing Mackay, there will remain $3,741.61. It is added that this entire fund will be absorbed by the payment of the following bequests: Sarah R. Hart-ley, executrix of the will of George Becks, deceased, $500; Mary McMacken, $500; Actors' Fund of America, $1,000, and $1,731.41 on account of a bequest to Garfield Memorial Hospital. According to the executors there will be nothing left with which to pay legacies to the Newsboys and Children's Aid Society, the Colored Orphans' Home and the Bell Home for Children, but they will fail en-tirely for want of funds with which to pay them. The beneficiaries thus cut out, it is explained, do not acquiesce in the construc-tion put upon the will by the complainants, but contend that legacies of $45,000 to Frederick Charles Lander, $12,000 to Baring Bros. & Co., for the benefit of Frederick Lander Young, and $13,000 to Charles Lander Young are "general or demonstra-tive, and not specific, legacies."

Messrs. Bell and Garfield suggest to the District Supreme Court that the cause be referred to its auditor for the purpose of stating their account as executors of the will, and for a proper distribution of the assets of the estate. This is asked on the ground that "it will be more convenient and less expensive" to have the accounting made in the Equit in the Equity Court rather than in Attorneys B. F. Leighton and William A.

McKenney represent the complainants.

EXCURSIONS.

Another of the regular Wednesday midweek trips to River View will be made by the steamer Samuel J. Pentz tomorrow especially for the young people. Millie De Aco will be the additional attraction in her wonderful slide of 500 feet, while hanging by her teeth from a live electric wire. Two performances will be given at 3 and p.m. Besides this there will be music and dancing all day, and the Ferris wheel, little river and all the amusements will be ready to give pleasure. The steamer Pentz leaves at 10 a.m., 2:15 and 6:45 p.m.

The Merrymakers gave their outing at Marshall Hall yesterday, and the affair proved to be quite a success. The Macalester, which carried the excursionists to the resort, was crowded with members of the club and their numerous friends. The Merrymakers' Club is widely known for its attractive dances during the fall and winter season, and yesterday dancing was made one of the special features of the day. The full orchestra of the Merrymakers furnished the music for the occasion and also rendered an excellent concert program. The 1st Regiment of Minutemen were guests of the Merrymakers, and on the arrival of the last boat held a full-dress parade on the spacious lawn. The program included com-positions by Wagner, Flotow, Verdi, Bizet and other well-known authors.

Matters.

The tug George W. Pride, which caught fire at her berth in Alexandria one week ago, is still lying where she sank, although several efforts have been made to raise her. A day or two ago the tug was raised to the surface and pumps were put to work on her, but just before she was ready to float a big leaver holding the tug up broke and the vessel again sank to the bottom. Since that accident high water has prevailed, and no effort has been made to raise her. Capt. Fair, owner of the tug, will endeavor to raise her today, and will take her to a railway to give her a thorough overhauling. The tug when completed will go into service towing sand and gravel laden scows on the river. It is not thought that the damage to the tug is very extensive.

The wholesale fish market on the 11th street wharf was fairly well supplied with some varieties of fresh fish this morning,

The Emergency Hospital Ambulance. To the Editor of The Evening Star: As a long-time citizen of Washington

I desire to enter my protest against the reckless and exceedingly dangerous speed at which the Emergency Hospital ambulance is usually driven along our streets. The most outrageous exhibition I have ever witnessed was enacted Monday along F street from the treasury to the pension office and return. The horse was rushed by the driver at his greatest speed, right along across 7th and 9th streets, which are always full of people on both sides. It may be argued that some poor unfortunate per-son in the ambulance needed quick attention at this useful institution, but I must say that it is a poor argument and a poorer excuse when the lives of several persons mahave been suddenly crushed out by this reckless trip. I am a friend of this fine hospital and would not retard or hinder its usefulness, but I do feel that some one in authority should call a halt to this dangerous practice.
